Kyle and Sarah created Brown Dog Fancy in a charming yet tiny kitchen in their Stamford, Connecticut starter home. Sarah explains that their spicy, tangy mustards were born from spending countless evenings cooking together in their small space with their two big brown dogs, Tug and Charlie, precariously underfoot.

As romantic and playful as it all sounds, the true vibe that was brewing was a secret competition between two type A amateur chefs who happened to be having a great deal of fun.

Brown Dog Fancy organically evolved from the mouth-watering recipes lovingly prepared by two very creative people falling deeply in love. This has turned out to be a recipe for gourmet food success.

Prior to their marriage in 2016, they spent weeknights enjoying each other's company while one upping each other with dinner cooking competitions. To spice things up during the constant quest for the weeknight win, Kyle developed countless mustards, rubs, marinades, and barbecue sauces to leverage his talent and delight Sarah's taste buds.

Soon friends began dropping by their home to help determine the daily champion. The mustards began venturing beyond their own dinner table with frequent appearances at neighborhood gatherings, holiday meals, and family get togethers. Requests for Kyle's tasty condiments started pouring in from friends, family, and strangers. After a little fine tuning (and much encouragement), Brown Dog Fancy specialty foods have made it to the market.

As expected, Kyle's favorite process of the business is focusing on recipe development and creating new formulations, while cooking with Sarah.
